

Tories Attempt to Destroy Reputations of Public Men Says King

Manion Replaces Logic With Abuse Premier Declares

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, March 22.—Instead of discussing public issues on their merits, the Conservative leader, Dr. R. J. Manion, and some of his supporters made "a deliberate effort to destroy the reputations of public men," Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared in a 30-minute election broadcast last night.

Mr. King said substitution of "the gross kind of personal abuse for political argument" is the process which destroyed democratic government in Germany, and "is also rapidly making its evil presence felt in our own land."

In the last of his national network addresses Mr. King told the voters that in Tuesday's Dominion election they would be helping to elect an administration which would guide Canada through the war, and possibly represent Canada at the peace table.

ONLY TWO CHOICES
With the National government party—the only other group with enough candidates to form a government if successful at the polls, Mr. King asked the voters to choose between an experienced administration and one made up of men "all unknown and having no name by which they could be known to the people." Speaking of third groups, none of which had enough candidates to form a government, the prime minister said they were "untested" and their "untested theories" should be left for discussion after the war.

"A vote cast for the candidate of a political group which has no majority in parliament cannot, in the present situation, be other than a vote against a strong, united government. It may serve to frustrate Canada's war effort; it cannot possibly promote it."

Appealing for maintenance of that unity which he said his administration had brought Canada, the prime minister referred to the Quebec election of last October when the endorsement given the government was "a vote for a strong, united government."

WATCHED BY ALL
"Canada's voice," as expressed by your vote on election day, will be heard in a political campaign of election or despite to the contending forces in Europe.

"It will be significant to all democrats, for it will be the first vote of a free democracy cast in a war where democracy is fighting for its life," he said.

Disruption of parliament last January was dictated by his view that "all unknown and having no name by which they could be known to the people" were "untested" and their "untested theories" should be left for discussion after the war.

These Three Are Re-Elected

HON. N. E. TANNER

HON. PETER DAWSON

HON. DR. W. W. CROSS

The two cabinet ministers of the Social Credit government and the Speaker of the last legislature all were re-elected in Thursday's provincial election. Mr. Tanner, minister of lands and mines, was re-elected in Cardston with a 531 majority. Mr. Dawson was returned in Little Bow by a 23 majority, and Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, minister of health, was returned in Hand Hills with a 93 majority.

Office five years, the prime minister said. They would certainly have been secured as they have never been menaced before. I pray with all my heart that they will also make real the dream of a just and enduring peace.

EXACTING FIVE YEARS
"The five years which lie before us will be the most difficult, the most dangerous, the most exacting five years in the history of this country."

"During these five years our security and existence of free people's world will be menaced before. I pray with all my heart that they will also make real the dream of a just and enduring peace."

Those who will guide the destinies of this nation are being called, therefore, to a great, long and arduous task. It is the task of the nation as a whole, the task of the people, the task of the government, the task of the individual. It is the task of the nation as a whole, the task of the people, the task of the government, the task of the individual.

SLANDEROUS ATTACKS
"There has been a deliberate effort to destroy the reputations of public men," the prime minister said. "There has been a deliberate effort to destroy the reputations of public men, to destroy the reputations of public men, to destroy the reputations of public men."

He questioned if there was a single Canadian who believed that any member of the government would knowingly countenance for one moment the betrayal of the national trust at a time when our country is at war.

The prime minister said that his own public career could not last much longer and there was little in the way of "honorable recognition" he could wish for beyond what he had already received.

SPARKS FOR OTHERS
In reacting above from political opponents the prime minister said he was thinking not of himself but of the consequences which will follow if honorable men, valuing their reputations, are deterred from entering parliament rather than submit to the degraded standards of public conduct so evident in the present campaign.

Dr. Manion's campaign tour had been "address with promissory notes which he can never meet, which he cannot redeem," the prime minister said.

In nearly every case it has been a pledge to spend the taxpayer's money on something which has nothing to do with winning the war.

The cost of keeping such promises "would be an impossible drain upon resources which will be desperately needed for the great task before us."

First Of 15 New Locomotives Is Delivered To C.N.
MONTREAL, March 22.—In order to meet the demands of increased traffic as a result of war preparations, the first of fifteen new locomotives under construction at the Montreal locomotive works was delivered to the Canadian National Railways yesterday.

The design and plans were prepared under the supervision of John Roberts, chief of motive power and car equipment of the C.N.R. who with S. J. Hungerford, chairman and president of the company, and N. B. Walton, vice-president of operations, engaged the engine at Bonaventure station.

Thoroughly modern in every respect they are equipped with mechanical stokers, feed water heaters and other devices to promote efficient operation. Primarily intended for freight service on the Atlantic coast, these locomotives can also be adapted for use in passenger service with a top speed of 60 miles per hour.

Cromwell Warned Against Repeating Toronto 'Incident'

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull told James H. R. Cromwell, United States minister to Canada, last night that his pro-Ally, anti-German speech at Toronto Tuesday "contravened standing instructions to American diplomatic officers" and warned him not to do it again.

Hull sent his telegram after receiving Thursday afternoon an official text of Cromwell's address.

The state department issued the following statement: "The secretary of state has now examined the text of the address made at Toronto on March 19 by the American minister to Canada, Mr. James H. R. Cromwell. The secretary of state has been deeply concerned by the address, particularly by the statements which contravened standing instructions to American diplomatic officers, as public discussion of controversial policies of other governments, particularly with governments engaged in war, without the prior knowledge and permission of this government, is not in accord with such instructions. Such public statements by our diplomatic representatives are likely to disturb the relations between this and other governments."

"Secretary Hull has telegraphed his views to Mr. Cromwell and has asked that in the future he observe the standing instructions."

CROMWELL SILENT
Although Cromwell was at his New Jersey home last night, following down there in his private plane after his Toronto address, the telegram was sent to the U.S. Legation at Ottawa, the official address of the new minister.

Hull announced yesterday he had received the U.S. Legation at Ottawa and also Cromwell to send him the text of the speech as soon as practicable.

Hull received late Thursday afternoon a letter from the legation at Ottawa. Nothing has been received from Cromwell.

The text of Hull's telegram was such as to lead officials to believe that more drastic action would be taken if Cromwell were in such another speech in similar vein. It was widely believed that the German embassy had been considering making a protest over the speech, which called for an Allied victory and a German demand for an armistice.

RECALL DEMANDED
Hull received yesterday a letter from Representative George F. W. Good, Massachusetts Republican, demanding the recall of Cromwell as the only suitable action in the circumstances.

Cromwell, who has been at his post only two months reported in political circles to be sounding out political leaders in New Jersey to ascertain the prospects of his becoming a candidate for U. S. senator.

A state department official gave out the following summary of the standing instructions which Secretary Hull said Cromwell had "contravened": "A chief of mission should not make public speeches outside of his country or any other country and he should not discuss the foreign policy of the United States or the text of any remarks he makes immediately after he makes them."

Has Little Chance
WINCHESTER, Eng., March 22.—The Admiralty, which called for the last Lord, was wiped out. Sir Montague Browning, as Viscount of the United Kingdom and Lord of the Admiralty, would rule the navy until the new admiral was staffed.

Nazi Planes, Subs Wreak Vengeance On Neutral Ships

LONDON, March 22.—Forty-eight hours of merciless Nazi air and U-boat attacks, principally on neutral shipping, had claimed up to a late hour last night 41 lives, with at least 20 persons missing, and a total of 11 vessels attacked.

Of this number four vessels, all of them Danish, were torpedoed and sunk.

The admiralty, in a communique announcing no ships had been sunk by Nazi air attacks on convoys, added:

"The Nazi wrath was thus vented yesterday almost entirely upon neutrals who, as they were unarmed, present a peculiar temptation to Nazi processes when out of convoy."

DANISH SHIP TORPEDOED
The latest U-boat victim was the Danish motorship Alger, 184 tons, torpedoed in the Atlantic Wednesday night and sunk within 10 minutes. Four of the crew and one woman passenger were lost. Twenty survivors, who reached shore after spending 10 hours in a lifeboat, said they were tormented without warning.

The admiralty announced the Viking, 1133 tons, and the Bothal, 2108 tons, were sunk Wednesday by submarines in Scottish waters. The Bothal was sunk by torpedoes and shellfire, and 20 of its crew were reported missing.

Three British and four Scandinavian vessels were attacked in air raids by the Nazis who claim to have sent a bomber over the Shetland Islands where Royal Air Force planes guard planes chased it away. No bombs were dropped.

The greatest loss of life was suffered in the sinking of the Bothal and the Viking, and the damaging of the British steamship Baron, 1420 tons. The Bothal lost 13 men, the Viking 16 and the Baron 11.

BOMBED SHIPS SAFE
The admiralty said in a recapitulation of the damage done by a German air raid on a convoy Tuesday night that the three vessels first reported bombed "now are safe" but that two others had reached port in a damaged condition. It stated that German claims of

KING APPEALS FOR CANADA TO DISPLAY UNITY

Maintenance of United Dominion Is Urged In Final Broadcast

OTTAWA, March 22.—Making the last of his national network addresses in the present election campaign Mr. King said that the last night broadcast was an appeal for the maintenance of unity in Canada which, he said, was necessary if Canada's war effort was to count in the British years which lie ahead of the British Empire.

Canada's voice, on March 26, he said, would carry a measure of clemency or despair to the contending forces in Europe.

"It will be significant to all democrats, for it will be the first vote of a free democracy cast in a war where democracy is fighting for its existence," he said. At the same time he said that the campaign of Mr. R. J. Manion and his lieutenants, which he termed a "deliberate effort to destroy the reputation of public men,"

Termed "the grossest kind of personal abuse" which, he said, had been substituted for political argument, he said it was this process which destroyed democratic government in Germany, and warned against it being followed in Canada.

Full text of Mr. King's last broadcast before the federal election campaign on March 26 will be found on page 2.

slightly damaged by a bomb hit. This presumably was the ship Prime Minister Chamberlain announced was slightly damaged in a bomb attack on March 22 of last Saturday.

A dispatch from Ljuiden, The Netherlands, said tonight that four German fighters picked up in the North Sea about 110 miles north of the Netherlands coast were landed near that town today. They were an officer and three non-commissioned officers of a German plane shot down in the sea.

Prohibition enforcement cost the United States almost $1,000,000 each month.

Brighten Your Wardrobe With A Gay Young Ensemble

B122 12-20

This gay dress and bolero ensemble has the verve and dash you'll want for your first spring outing. The bodice is made of a fresh poplin, striped fabric, the skirt and bolero in a solid color to contrast. The little bolero is brief and perky, the skirt very full with a waistband to give you the tiniest of mid-ridges. The skirt and bolero are attached. If you like, you can make them both of one material.

Style No. 5143 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards of 38-inch material for skirt and bolero; 18 yards 38-inch contrasting fabric for skirt. Pattern No. 5082 is designed for one size, adaptable to any bodice, and must be ordered separately.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coin for pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. Be sure to state size you wish. Address: Pattern Department, The Edmonton Bulletin, Edmonton, Alberta.

The New Spring Fashion Book is a "must" for a smart wardrobe. The full color illustrations of over a hundred styles will help you select your clothes for all occasions. Send for your copy today. The price is 15 cents.

What To Do

I would like to know what to do: (1) If a woman enters her home with guests, a woman of women and men—should the hostess enter the house first and invite them in or let them pass in first? (2) If a guest is taken through the house to another room, who passes through the doors first—the hostess or guest? (3) If a man is leaving the house with several women, does he pass out first or should he let the women go out first? (4) Is it ever proper for a man to pass out of the door first? Think you?

Answer—Unless the house is in darkness, the natural procedure would be for the hostess to open the door of her home and invite the guests to enter first—a man guest, however, would wait until the women guests and hostess had entered. Also, if a door happens to swing out, the man would necessarily have to step out, first to open the door for a woman.

Correct Posture Will Flatter Easter Outfit

By ALICIA HART

Unless her posture is perfect, the 15-year-old's Easter outfit won't be 100 per cent becoming.

If a youngster's clothes are to be truly flattering, the must, as does her mother, carry shoulders square instead of slumped forward or thrust stiffly backward.

There must be no exaggerated hunch of the chest, no protruding upper half of her body up and away from the lower half.

No youngster should be nagged to hold her shoulders back unless the nagger is ready then and there to teach the child a great deal about posture from head to toe. Forcing shoulders back to unnatural positions in the center of the hollows in the chest, stomach to protrude and hips to seem inches larger than they actually are.

THESE BRING GOOD POSTURE

Instead of over-doing the "hold your shoulders back, darling" act, teach the little girl to stand with feet about 10 inches apart, from a wall with all of her backbone erect, chest three or four vertebrae at the back touching the floor.

The back of her head, shoulders and crease of backbone should touch the wall. Chest will be high, stomach drawn up and in, hips pulled back, her feet will stand much better she feels and looks this way. Then encourage her to walk with her spinal column in as straight a line as possible.

Teach her to sit as well as stand correctly. The lower part of her

$40,000 Up In Smoke

BANBUY, Eglond, March 22—Bambuy's 10,000 (17,000) school built 10 years ago, was destroyed by fire one night while the fire brigade was on the way. The school, which was a fine building, was almost completely destroyed. The school was a fine building, was almost completely destroyed. The school was a fine building, was almost completely destroyed.

Superstition And Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and the Health Magazine.

Among the strangest of the common beliefs are those associated with tennals. Some seem to be protective and others symbolic.

Among many superstitious people, the tennals are always burned after being cut to bring good luck. It is also said that anyone who throws the parings from the tennals on the floor should pick them up at once or he will be forced to pick them up when he dies. It is considered to be unlucky to cut tennals on Sunday, but cutting tennals on Monday will bring success.

In the mind of primitive man, all superstition and control over events depended on getting some portion of the body of the person concerned with it to perform magic. Thus there are innumerable superstitions about working magic which depends on getting hairs from the head, teeth, fingernails or toenails to be used as symbols of the person about to be "cured."

If one finds it impossible to obtain some portion of the body of the person concerned, the magic would have to be brought about at a distance and not directly on the person of the one who was to be cured. For that reason, merely to be a fount of protection came the custom to make certain that toenails or fingernails or teeth removed from the body were carefully disposed of.

Nowadays it is important to dispose properly of material removed from the body simply to prevent "shingles" which is a parasitic infection. This is so widespread that it is quite possible that people of the past may have protected themselves against the spread of foot infections by making certain that the toenails would be carefully disposed of.

Etiquette Your Enter To A Gay Social Whirl

Two popular members of the social set on the way to a party—delightfully poised, each knowing the other will do the correct thing.

No awkward hesitations at the elevator. She goes first, entering and leaving. He removes his hat, as a man should in an elevator with women—unless he is in a crowded elevator in which case he may omit it. At the party, too, this well-bred pair will acknowledge introductions with a gracious "How do you do?"—never with the ineffectual "Pleased to meet you."

Such poised behavior is just a matter of finding out what's correct. Do you wonder which of a recently introduced pair should go first? The answer is simple. The man or the woman? The man. And gracious for the woman to reply, "I hope we meet again soon."

Should you answer an invitation to a church wedding? No, but you may reply to an invitation for the reception. At a restaurant, who follows the hostess? The girl does, preceding her escort.

Don't risk an embarrassing social

Minute Make-Ups

Are you guilty of using too much lipstick? Use should look naturally soft and red. Too generous an application makes them hard and shiny. Use tissue to wipe away the excess amount. Lip smudge can be natural looking by using lipstick, according to the new "Shocking Blue."

STARTING NEW BLUE

A new intense color is featured in early spring collections and is used with startling effect in both accessories and costumes. It is clear, hard, wake-up, turquoise blue particularly effective when accented with black. A fashionable Fifth Avenue shop shows a fine velvet coat of the new shade over a black dress with black accessories for street wear. For evening, a black dress with blue trim is shown with gloves, hat, slippers and carmen of the new "Shocking Blue."

CHAPTER XXVII

CAST OF CHARACTERS

ANN BROWN, orphan daughter of a banker, since in a position of

PAUL HAYDEN, stock room boy with ambition

STEVE CLAYBOURNE, wealthy playboy

CLARA BROOKE, dime store counter girl

MRS. TEMPLE, wealthy debutante

Yesterday Irene Temple explained that she is in love with Steve, and will marry him in the near future. Ann turned down a date with Steve, and she changed down on her service. Mr. Temple was a doctor, and he questioned the very existence of the stock room Ann knew something about the business.

CHAPTER XXVII

MR. TEMPLE glanced at Ann, his keen eyes troubled. Suddenly she felt sick and frightened. After all, she'd come to this house with and references and with stolen goods.

Mr. Temple said, "Ann, you and Plunkett come to the library." To gether, they followed him. Ann leading the way with her head hanging.

Well, Plunkett—Mr. Temple pe-gan, nipping at the end of a cigar. I know where your watch is. She looked smug and satisfied. Ann stared at her, horrified. So that whole of skirts in the hall had been imaginary.

The careful, Plunkett, Mr. Temple warned. "That's a grave charge."

Go up and look for yourself! Look in the bottom drawer of her dresser. Your watch is there and a roll of silver. I seem very much of my own eyes.

Ann flushed angrily. "You will keep out of my room in the future,"

Plunkett said.

Mr. Temple broke in. "Just a minute—just a minute. This accusation will be easy to prove." Ann shook with rage. "I have never stolen a thing in my life. Mr. Temple, if your things are found in my room they were planted there."

Just at this moment, Irene Brown, eye-eyed, wearing an exotic negligee, drifted into the room. "What's the excitement?" she asked.

My watch has disappeared," her father explained. "Plunkett says it's in Ann's—Miss Brown's—room."

If it is, Plunkett put it there," Irene said calmly. "How do you know so much, anyway?" she asked of the color.

"Well—"

I know—you were snooping. That proves my point in Ann's room."

Mr. Temple ran a harassed hand over his thinning hair. "Quiet—" all of you. I don't care who took my watch—I want it back. When I have it back I'll fire the whole lot of you."

Plunkett didn't look quite so smug. "I don't like to squeal on folks," he said, "but I can't help the watch. This is what I looked in her room."

"Push," excited Irene.

Mr. Temple started for the door. "You two girls stay here. Plunkett, take me to the drawer where you saw the watch." He strode up the stairs, Plunkett panting behind him.

"She's a rotter," Irene said disgustedly.

Ann nodded. She felt chilly. It was no small matter to be accused of stealing. And she hadn't a doubt that Mr. Temple would return with the damning evidence. He did.

"You may go, Plunkett," he said, placing a roll of silver on the table and fingering the watch. Ann stared at the watch.

"But this is mine," she said. "That watch belonged to my father. And the roll of silver?"

"Well—"

Mr. Temple stood before her. Gravely he looked into her white face. His expression was one of disappointment rather than blame. "Don't do that, Ann," he said gently. "Don't lie. I'd rather think you were right the first time. Use the goods I had been planted on you. You see, I happen to know my own watch."

"I have it a moment!" Ann held out her hand and he gave it to her. She opened the back and saw "See?" she said, handing it back to him. "My father carried that watch until he died. I've had it ever since."

Mr. Temple looked at the inscription. He took a pair of spectacles from his pocket and looked again. "Well—" he gazed, his eyes darting to Ann's face and back to the engraving. Irene went to look over his shoulder.

To Peter Temple on his 21st birthday," she read, repeating, "Peter Temple—But your watch says John Temple—I've read it a hundred times."

Her father asked abruptly, "Where did you get this, Ann?"

"As long as I can remember my father carried it."

"But your name is Brown."

"Yes, Peter Brown was my father."

"Peter Brown?" thoughtfully. "Where did he get this watch?"

"I don't know," she faltered. "My father made his living by—well, by gambling. Often he took things in payment of debts, watches and diamonds, once a yacht. I always thought he sold them for the watch that way. He sold the other things, but never this watch."

"Probably appreciated it," Mr. Temple nodded. He gave the watch to Ann. "Now the question is—where's mine?" he asked.

As if the words were a cue for an entrainer, Blake, sick in his uniform, came into the room.

"Borrowed your watch last night," he said. "Blake was in my black. Hope you don't mind."

The watch he handed over was exactly like the one Ann held in her hand.

"Well, I'll be—"

Mr. Temple murmured. He held out his hand. Ann, "Forgive an old fool, will you?" he asked, smiling at her.

"Of course."

Ann was trying to reason it out.

Answer: Male mice are known as bucks, and females as does.

Plunkett, snooping in her room, had seen the watch. When Mr. Temple came to the breakfast table with his grievance also evidently thought that Irene had played into her hands. She was probably convinced, at that moment, that her troubles with Ann were over. If she only knew it. Ann thought, they had only begun.

Mr. Temple started for the door. Irene caught his arm. "Wait a minute," she said. "Maybe Ann's father's real name was Temple. Maybe you're my cousin, Ann. We look alike—more than one person has noticed it. Oh, isn't this exciting—just like the third act of a play."

"Till suit me to have Ann for a cousin," Blake put in.

Mr. Temple's sharp eyes went from one girlish face to the other. "You two do look alike," he exclaimed. "Tell me about your father, Ann. Sit down, let's be comfortable."

They all sat down, Irene, as usual, perched on the arm of her father's chair. "Go on, Ann," he said. "What did he look like?"

"He was tall and dark, sort of dashing looking. He had the most charming manners in the world. He made mother and me love him in spite of ourselves."

"That sounds like Pete," Mr. Temple nodded.

"Pete—that's what I always called him. He was educated and had been well reared. I used to think maybe he was the blackstep of some nice family. Perhaps he got into a scrape and took another name."

"I'll say Pete got into a scrape, dozens of them," Mr. Temple laughed excitedly. "Good old Pete," he mused. "The most lovable rascal I ever knew. I was the conservative type and always a little in awe of him—where he is now, child, he broke off to ask."

Ann of the fire. They all sat with their feet and the watch. They couldn't save the watch. "It hadn't been so long since the tragedy and her voice shook. "I've been lonely without Irene," she faltered.

Irene appealed to her father. "Do you think this Pete person was your brother?"

"It certainly sounds like it, my dear. Wait—do you remember if he had any identifying marks, Ann?"

"He had a scar over his right eye, he was left-handed."

Mr. Temple sighed. "That's Pete I remember when he gashed his head. The doctor took an autograph. He signed again. 'It almost killed me when my father disinherited him. He bought him a one-way ticket to Seattle.'"

"He married my mother in Seattle, she was a kindergarten teacher."

"And he never straightened up," Irene sang out. "But look, Dad—that makes Aunt Mabel right. There was good stuff in Pete."

"I thought might. There was good in Mother and me—we adored him."

Mr. Temple nodded. "Everyone adored him. It was his undoing."

Irene sang out. "But look, Dad—that makes Aunt Mabel right. There was good stuff in Pete."

"Lumberjills" At Work

Two hundred women and girls of the women's land army are now getting down to real hard work in a lonely part of Suffolk. They are busy from dawn to sunset logging and trimming trees, clearing undergrowth, looking after young trees in the nurseries and planting them on Forestry Commission land. His hard work but the modern girl is tough, and they are enjoying the open air life to the full. They should be good wives for our Canadian woodmen after the war.

200 Tons of Bridge Go Into Place

Giant cranes lower the largest single girder ever fabricated in the United States into place on the piling of the Thomas A. Edison bridge across the Harlem river at North Amos, N.J. It weighs over 200 tons, exceeds 300 feet in length.

U.S. Minister Visits Gold Mine

Bomb Too Deadly

Bomb designer for the Baltimore Glenn L. Martin plant, Lester P. Barlow told the U. S. Senate Military Affairs Committee of an explosive so destructive that minutes of the session were burned to prevent the formula from falling into the hands of a foreign power. A combination of liquid oxygen and carbon, it is intended, he said, for use in mines. Barlow is shown with an aerial bomb he invented.

Indian Sign On Swastika

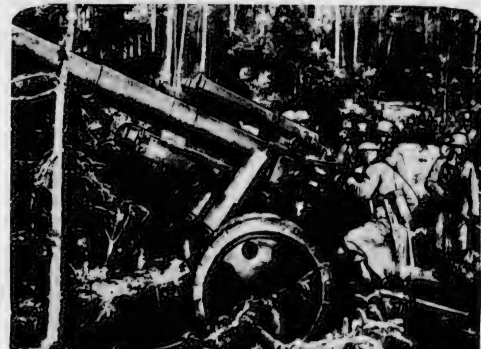

The swastika, age-old symbol of friendship among Arizona Indians, and later trademark of the Nazi party, will never again denote the handprints of the Apache, Dine, Navajo and Papago tribes because it has been "desecrated" by "acts of oppression." Hopi leader Fred Kabotie is pictured signing his name to resolution foreclosing the swastika, adopted by tribes at recent ceremony in Tucson, Ariz.

British Fliers Answer Call To Arms, Wings

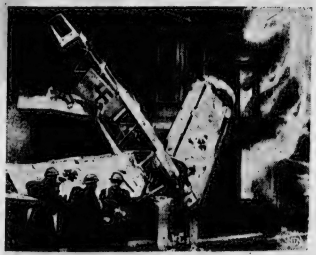

British combat pilots are shown rushing to their fighting planes to go shift to give battle to Germans, war planes that have been reported headed their way over French territory. The British censor didn't confide how the big fight, if any, came out.

Indians Swing Into Britain's Line of Empire

Garbed in turbans, sweaters and shorts, a detachment of Indian troops swings along on parade after their recent arrival in Egypt. They are part of large reinforcements added to the permanent garrison of 10,000 men which British maintain in Egypt.

Rehearsal For Nazi Crack-up

Air raid over England. German bomber shot down! Air Red Precautions squads to the rescue. This was the highly realistic show put on in recent British civil defense demonstrations. In this photo, ARP workers are carrying out a "casualty."

First Visitor Of His Kind

Looking cheery over his feat is the first Emperor penguin ever to cross the Equator arriving in New York from Little America. He'll live in the National Zoo, Washington.

Beauty At Bar

CRACE TANNEN once voted most beautiful co-ed at Washington Square College, N.Y., pictured as she was admitted to the bar of New York. Although fees as an artist's model helped pay her way through law school, she said "Everybody has forgotten that beauty title by now."

Winnipeg Post

Group Captain A. B. Shriver has been appointed to command of No. 2 Training Command with headquarters at Winnipeg. Previously Group Captain Shriver was director of works and buildings in the R.C.A.F. and served for five years as O.C. of the R.C.A.F. station at Delta Beach, B.C.
